Daniel Demerin

As a former animator/designer turned developer, I bring my reinvigorated sense of purpose to tackle the coding world with a passion for learning, an artistic eye, and a deep curiosity for full-stack web development.

PROJECTS

Daydream Books — Community-curated database of children's books

- Built from the ground-up using C# with ASP.NET, Javascript with React, PostgresQL, and REST API, deployed to the web through Docker and hosted by Heroku
- Users can upload their own books to the database and read those stories on a dynamic page-flipping UI
  - https://daydream-books.herokuapp.com/
  - https://github.com/ddemerin/daydream-capstone

Suncoast Overflow — Collaboratively-built Stack Overflow clone

- Worked as a team member to recreate the front-end (developed with React Hooks) and back-end (developed with .Net and PostgreSQL) of the mobile-version of Stack Overflow
  - https://wijs-suncoast-overflow.herokuapp.com/
  - https://github.com/ddemerin/SuncoastOverflow

Octocats — A React clone of GitHub's Octodex

- First project using ReactJS that used React State Hooks to store, map, and render data from API calls while matching the HTML and CSS styling of the original site.
